Henry Ward Beecher's Fourth of July Speech at Woodstock.

There was a galaxy of attractions at the Fourth of July celebration at Woodstock, Connecticut. The guest of the day was President Grant, and Beecher and Butler were the chief orators. The speech of the latter we shall present to morrow. The following was Mr Beecher's address.

It was arranged that Governor Woodford should make the main speech on this occasion. I was expected to do something supplementary but when it was understood that General Butler was coming up here, Governor Woodford and I put our heads together and concluded that we should put the burden of the speaking on him [laughter] and we have conveyed to him this information, and he has prepared himself accordingly [Great laughter] He laughs himself as if to turn away the force of his remarks, but he will not dare say that on Saturday last he left New York with us and after learning this fact, he shoved off home to make his preparation over Sunday [Laughter] I have no doubt it will answer the expectation of all assembled here on this occasion.

Fellow citizens, I am sorry for you, but there is one other party that suffers more, and that is he who is about to speak to you. We are all miserable together this afternoon [Laughter] We are gathered together upon our annual patriotic boasting day, we tell what great men our fathers were, and, as like begets like, we elegantly leave it to be inferred what sons our fathers had [Great laughter] We read again the Declaration of Independence as we keep the old Queen Ann's firearms over the mantelpieces of our chimneys, to show what sort of guns our fathers shot, though it be fifty years past. So we exhibit again the old copy of the Declaration of Independence, which was good at the beginning and was good at the end and was good in the middle. But that was gone by long ago. What do you care and what do I care what our fathers suffered before they licked Great Britain? They settled all that long ago, and the only good of such rehearsal on this occasion is to hear it read by a good voice. As a historical document it is interesting. I expected to hear, and was not disappointed, some allusion made to the great conflict which has recently been concluded. After all, the fighting was the least part of that business. Although General Grant is here present acting to make a speech to you on the matter—[great laughter]—I I have no doubt he thinks there was some fighting. Yet after all, measure it as much as you please make the diameter coequal with that of the earths, and then double it and it was the least part of all it was done in that great four years that elapsed for, while we were fighting this country was enabled to unfold an example, and to make a demonstration of government which it never made before, and could not have made, except under some such pressure as that. Any yacht will stand weather when it is moored in New York Harbor, put it out to sea where the tornado catches it, and then she is brought to her moorings and she shows you how she is made and what stuff she is made of. So with a great people spread on a great continent, almost rather in abundance. Why shouldn't she be prosperous? Men said this is no test of republican governments, and no test that its people were the greatest in the world, and its government the greatest. There are two governments in the world—the imperial and the democratic—everything between them being bastard. It is an experiment. I would not say that republicanism was not the best form of government in the world, but it is the one that suits the American people, and I will not determine whether it would not be a better form of government for monarchies than that they hold. When I spoke in London, Exeter Hall, in 1863, on this subject several Americans nudged me, and said: Explain how it is liberty loving democrats are hobnobbing with the Russian officers in New York,' and my reply was: I have found more sympathy from mankind for the enslaved, and more liberty in the heart of the Russian Government, than I did in the heart of the English Government, which had its face against us in the attempt to emancipate the slaves.' [Applause] But I am not here this afternoon to make out a case for His Majesty the Emperor. I am to speak this afternoon for Your Majesties the Democrats, and I hold that the great conflict through which we have passed—the great ten years which is now rounding out and ripening itself—has done a great deal more than to show we could overcome the South. That is the least. I am glad it has done that—that we were able to do it. I knew we should. We knew we should. I knew it for this reason—that this people are slow, cautious, mighty, particular, and hard to get a going, but, like a huge heap of green hickory, when they get a going nothing can put them out, and so we gathered momentum daily as we went on. The South are more mercurial. They start quicker, and stop quicker. They charge we did not beat them, but wore them out. I take it so, for fighting means wearing out, and it does not mean merely the bayonet or the bullet, for there are a great many things beside to constitute war. But the great point is this. They were whipped, and the Government was saved, and the great Line of longitude that God put round about the North and South to hold them together was not snapped, and it will be one country unless we betray those principles on which unity depends. Of the few things which have been demonstrated by this conflict one is that a democratic government can contain all the elements of functions which have been supposed to be peculiarly the property of strong governments. If there be one thing that a strong government boasts of, it is this, and the execution of law, for it must maintain order in the community. I point out the example of the States of the North to more than 20,000,000 of people convinced with civil war and with devoted themselves to the struggle of five years duration, and I point the world to the example of the nation residing in peace in amending the structure of society carrying on the mechanical arts carrying forward education and enlarging and developing benevolent operations. There was a time when not only the unanimity of the Government was saved during such an intestine war but when so many farmers paid old mortgages when so many debts were paid when so many colleges founded new professorship and so many shops were established for internal industry. More than that it has shown strength favorable to mighty battle. It was said that a Republic never had standing army or expect to excel, military power. They are huge and strength is so disturbed that it cannot be concentrated. War means concentration of power, and therefore this Republic could not be a war nation. I refer you to any nation on the face of the globe, no matter how rich or extensive, who could in so short a time muster a million soldiers as the North did, and march the same number in the South. When the people thus determine their laws they get them, when they determine their policy they carry it out, and then the people say war there is no other. On the earth like a free population dare to make an army if you dare. The officers prepared God forbid that old West Point should go down—that is your standing army. Put West Point down and you either become feeble or else you are obliged to enlist 20,000 men to uphold the Government. Educate officers and you can dispense with the army, for it takes but a little time to discipline the men and put them into perfect organization. Educate the officers or you must substitute for them a standing army. They are cheap, too. There is no body of men less warlike than military officers (laughter), therefore we are not in danger from them. I set out to make that sober, but I could not resist the temptation, though I do assure you I had not McClellan in my thought (Great laughter) We have raised 1,500,000 men, and never was an army better served, better clothed and handled, and better organized, just so soon as they had learned to adapt their military education to the pattern of the magnitude of this continent. And three or four years of such fighting as they experienced I hope never again will be seen in this land. The conflict that has been settled could not be avoided. But methinks there has been enough of bloodshed, and that the sacrifice made should stand for ages before God. Well, it was predicted loudly that just as soon as our army became disbanded there would be no earthly power to restrain the ambitious officers, and that there would be no peace from the disbanded soldiery who came home with the habits of the camp. As near as I can observe, it is certain that the camp spoiled a good many boys, and it is just as certain that the camp saved as many others.—A great many went into the war good, and broke down under temptation, and became bad, and came home sorrows to their friends, but it is just as true that there were hundreds and thousands of lame limbed, purposeless boys who went into that camp, their patriotism became fired even to their fingers' end, and they came home citizens, of whom we should feel proud. And as to the demoralization of the army—the snow that melts on the hillside fails not to leave a freshet, nor is it possible for the storm which bursts over the mountain not to upturn banks and undermine trees, but you are witnesses that in the disbandment of this army, in no city or county or town in these States was any complaint made that any one suffered by the incursion or by the misconduct of our soldiers [Cheers] It is a testimony I desire to have borne over the world, that a million of American soldiers went back to the farm and shop, and no order of society and not one law of the community tarnished by their return. It is a testimony they deserve. It is a testimony to the institutions under which they have had their training. It is said that a Republican Government could never pay great debts. The bonds of such a Government could never be negotiated, and the people would not pay them if they did not like to be taxed. Well, I will admit that if you had studied and got the devil to help you (and he is a good student), you could not have brought to bear on the American people a temptation that would be more trying. This Government was encumbered with a debt of $3 000,000,000, and on its efforts to pay that debt I look with interest. I prophesied it would pay it. I have prophesied other things, and let me say that one half of me is as good a prophet as you could find, and if you could bring up the other half I would be better satisfied with myself. I was abroad at the time. I was aware of the people's willingness to pay a national debt incurred in maintaining the unity of the Government, and I had a personal interest in its fulfillment. And how is it now? I not only declare that we have proved ourselves a great people, but I ask, take it man for man, that there is not such a wealth producing population on the globe as the American people. We make more money per head than any any other people on the globe, and it will be joyful tidings to most of you when I say we shall continue to make it. We are a people to whom poverty is a spur, and it girds us up and makes us work harder. We have the ability and the heart to do it, and when this question was made the issue between the great political parties, and when every inducement was held out to repudiate it, this people, with one voice, said the debt shall be paid, principal and interest to the uttermost farthing [Applause] It is the worst possible thing for a nation to have the reputation of dishonesty. It does not pay for a nation like ours that wants money to build up a continent, and its reputation is dearer to it than that of the merchant. No people can bear to lose their reputation, and we less than any other, who want money as a loan. It is our plough our saw, and our locomotive, and we can't afford to lose the reputation of honesty. We have it and we shall keep it. We have refused to repudiate our just obligations, expressed or implied, and we have received the benefit of our integrity and honesty [Applause] I am thankful for that expression of your approbation, but it is not what I expected. I expected to see you go wild. There is another matter which I think has been demonstrated by this conflict, and that is that this nation is a peaceful nation as well as a war like one. The capacity of war is in us, but the disposition of peace rules, and it ought to be known that great as our powers, we don't desire to infringe on the liberty of any other, or to circumscribe its freedom. God has given us enough, in all conscience. We have more than we can attend to, and more than we can give away. We want no more territory, we want to disturb no nation in their territory, we want the world to understand that we are at peace with Mexico and with Central America and the West India Islands. I am at peace with Cuba, and I wish the Cubans would lick out those Spaniards [Applause] I would willingly do everything I could without violating the proper neighborhood of nations to attain that end. Gen Grant and I feel about alike on that subject. He would like to see that thing settled in right way but we don't see how our hands are to get into it. We want the world to understand that this is no nation of freebooters. Filibustering has had its millennium. We say to England which was so distracted at our magnitude and wished to see it cut in two—and to France, who held the babe in one hand while England reached the sword to every its head from its body—America wants no war, she will tolerate no force on foreign soil and she will put no soldiers on them. Peace for them peace for us, for we hold that we have advanced in the family of nations to the period in which we are to share the higher graces of civilization with the nations of the earth. Let us educate the people, preserve the liberty of the people consistently with the rights of one of the other, give full toleration in religion, give boundless freedom to commerce, freedom of thought, of sentiment, freedom of belief, freedom of trade, freedom everywhere, and that is abundantly sufficient for the wants of the world. I see a man carping there—[pointing to a man in the crowd]—and it puts me in peril. I will shut up. If I linger any longer I shall give the untruth to what I said in the beginning about General Butler, and I am aware already in advance that he is getting impatient at this long speech of mine, and, therefore, proud as I am to be associated with General Butler on this platform, and joyful as I should be to stand on that platform be one day expects to reach—[laughter]—I do not think it is fair for me, as I have got a profession already, and have got along pretty well in life, to stand in his way. I want him to have a fair hearing and a good chance, and I will stop now, although the most eloquent part of my speech was that which was yet to come. [Great cheering]

Cruelty to Boy Acrobats.

The Hanlon Brothers are now performing at the Alhambra, London, and their performance suggests the following remarks to the editor of the London Orchestra. The boys in question performed the feats described some months ago at the Tammany in New York.

"A performance so hazardous as to make it highly objectionable is nightly repeated at the Alhambra. The peril to which a little boy is put is absolutely cruel. Three acrobats—two grown up, one a child of eight or nine—are concerned in it. A net of cotton cord, which may possibly break at any time, is stretched across the stage. About thirty feet above the net is a frame of some thirty feet long. At either end of this are short stirrups, by which the elder brothers hang head downwards. The boy takes his place in the middle, standing upon the frame. One of the brothers now begins to swing, and the boy leaps from the bar at the precise moment, and his hands are caught by those of the swinging man, and the two sweep backwards and forwards in regular motion. The other brother now begins to swing, and the boy is thrown from one to the other, sometimes caught by the hands, sometimes by the ankles, sometime throwing a somersault, sometimes two somersaults in his flights from one to the other. It is nothing short of marvellous, but though done with apparent ease, the risk is alarming. The extreme difficulty of the feat can be readily understood by all who have an acquaintance with feats of the trapeze. In ordinary trapeze feats the ropes are of so great a length that the arc of a circle described by the performer as he flies through the air intersects the arc of the circle described by the trapeze bar for a considerable distance, and he can catch it if it meets him at the level of the chest, face, or the extreme stretch of his arms over his head. In the short swings made by the Hanlons, the radius of which is only their own lengths and the two additional feet of the stirrup rope, it is necessarily only for a moment that the swinger can be in a position to catch the hands of the flying boy, the mistake of the fifth of a second in his swing would send him out of reach. The full knowledge of this is required for the full appreciation of this marvellous feat. The performance is terminated by the boy ascending to a still higher bar over the centre of the frame, and from this he leaps something like twenty feet down before he is caught by the hands of the swinging brother.

"We need hardly point out how imminent is the risk of an accident to this poor boy as he swings through the air. Unnatural development of his muscles have already stunted him, broadened his chest and given his frame an abnormal hardness. He has been two years and a half learning and practicing these feats, and is perfectly fearless, having never during the whole training hurt himself in the slightest degree. But even supposing he does not break his neck, which may happen at any moment, the effects of such severe training at his early age may be ruinous hereafter. Public opinion should check such repulsive sights, if the law will not."

The Bouquet of Good Whisky.

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

Our readers are doubtless familiar with the manner in which sausages and "fine-cut" obtain their rich flavor. On those points it isn't necessary to interview a hash house waiter. But even many old-time barkeepers are entirely ignorant of some of the methods to impart to whisky fresh from the still the odor, oil, bead and bouquet of age and richness. Many methods are employed, but all are not generally known. One of these, which we confess comes upon us with a suddenness and newness that is rather startling, shames us for our ignorance in the past. That we should so long have remained ignorant of a process that serves a double purpose—sanitary in its effects upon those who put it in operation—and grateful to the nostrils of the man who returns thanks and offers incense daily to the memory of the discoverer of whisky in the original package, is humiliating in the extreme.

How far the perspiring bodies of a dozen stout distillery men, bathing after a hot summer day's labor, in a big tub of whisky, soon to be placed upon the market may contribute to be oleaginousness of the delightful stimulant, our readers who drink whisky can judge for themselves. It is a fact, however, the distillers, in encouraging their workmen to take this bath at least twice a week, are not altogether selfish. They understand very well that there is nothing so cleansing to the cuticle covered with the perspiration incident to a hot day and much work, as a good bath in the raw whisky. The men emerge naked from the tubs after a short scrub, in which soap is not necessary, white and brown in the glow of health and cleanliness, which is next to godliness always, with every particle of grease and dirt with which they had been afflicted removed, and left floating in this novel bath. Nothing is wasted, however, for the "body" of the whisky is thus increased, and the oil and bead in which we delight brought up speedily. The deliciousness of the odor is said to be attributable, not a little, to this happy process. Our reader who drinks cannot fail to remember the sweet, musk-like aroma of his last, never-to-be-forgotten drink of 'twelve year old,' which, we can readily conceive, must have come from a Kentucky still employing the recently enfranchised, and we can discover that we are not yet fully acquainted with the debt of gratitude we owe to the men who fought nobly.

This admirable plan for imparting age and strength to whisky reminds us of what we have seen in a Louisiana sugar and molasses house, where the barrels of sugar are placed on rafters, without any flooring, in order that the molasses may drain from them, through bung-holes, into a vat below. Men engaged at this work generally chew tobacco.

At Ravenna, Ohio, the other day, a man and woman, before the Mayor, performed this singular marriage ceremony:

'Before you, as witness, I agree to take Walter Pierce, who I now hold by the hand and who I intelligently, religiously and spiritually love, to be my companion through life, and I agree not to usurp over or transcend him in any particular. CATHARINE STOODL."

'By this voluntary and premeditated act, in your presence, we declare ourselves religiously, philosophically and scientifically married.

The Mississippi Steamboat Race.

The telegraph informs us of the arrival at St. Louis on Monday, of the racing steamers "General Lee" and "Natchez," from New Orleans, the former being victor by three hours and forty-four minutes, and having made the trip in three days, eighteen hours and fourteen minutes.

Until the other day, the time between New Orleans and St. Louis, made in 1844, by the J. M. White, has been the fastest. That time was three days, twenty-three hours and nine minutes. But on the 22d of June, the Natchez, a Cincinnati built boat, arrived at St. Louis, having made the trip from New Orleans in three days, twenty-one hours and fifty-eight minutes, thus beating the time of the J. M. White by one hour and eleven minutes.

The Lee was built at Louisville, and having long claimed to be the fastest boat on the river, it was at once determined the attempt should be made to beat the time of the Natchez. So she stripped herself for a race, steamed down to New Orleans and waited quietly for the Natchez to make her appearance. The Natchez, it is said, made no such unusual preparations as the Lee. The latter boat arranged to have its fuel supplied from barges stationed in the middle of the stream, while the former made its regular landings, and received its fuel in the ordinary manner. In still other respects, the Lee is said to have been in better racing condition than its competitor, so that the result will not be accepted as final. Another insane match, comprising an old-fashioned "blow-up," and scores of lives lost, will doubtless decide the question.

The Lee left New Orleans at 4:54 last Friday afternoon and the Natchez three minutes afterward, fifteen thousand people being assembled to see the steamers off.

At 11:08 p. m., on the second inst., the Lee passed Memphis, traveling at a tremendous rate of speed. Her competitor had fallen an hour behind. The Memphis Avalanche of the 2d gives the following account of how the people along the river were worked up on the subject:

It is estimated that at least one million of dollars have already been bet on the race, about three-fifths on the Lee's winning. New Orleans is wild with excitement, and betting going on furiously. One enthusiastic admirer of the Natchez in that city has staked all his cash, and closed last night by betting his house and lot against thirty thousand dollars that the Natchez would arrive at Cairo before the Lee. In Baton Rouge, Bayou Sara, Natchez and Vicksburg, the betters were so numerous that the women had to act as stakeholders.

The correspondent of the Cincinnati Gazette, in a dispatch dated Cairo, July 3, says:

Dropping on board the Lee in mid river, as though shot from a cannon, I managed to obtain the following items during a two mile ride. The Lee's officers report leaving New Orleans at 4:59, p. m., June 30th. She arrived here at 5:59 this evening. New Orleans time, making three days and one hour out between the two cities. The Natchez was precisely one hour and twenty minutes behind the Lee at Cairo point. The following is the time of the Lee as kept by her pilot and clerk, who both agree: From New Orleans to Carrolton, 28 minutes; to Harry Hills, 1 hour 30 seconds; Red Church, 1 hour 39 minutes; College Point, 3 hours 50 minutes 30 seconds; Courent, 9 hours 59 minutes; Donaldsonville, 4 hours 53 minutes; Plaquemine, 2 hours 6 minutes; Baton Rouge, 8 hours 25 minutes; Fort Tunica Island, 11 hours 56 minutes; Red river, 2 hours 56 minutes; Natchez, 17 hours 11 minutes; Rodney, 20 hours 45 minutes; St. Joseph 21 hours; Grand Gulf, 22 hours 4 minutes; Warrenton, 24 hours 4 minutes; Vicksburg, 1 day 36 minutes; head of Pawpaw Island, 1 day 2 hours 14 minutes; Napoleon, 1 day 16 hours 20 minutes; White River 1 day 15 hours 25 minutes; Helena, 1 day 23 hours 26 minutes; St. Francis river, 2 days 2 minutes; Memphis, 2 days 6 hours 9 minutes; New Madrid, 2 days 19 hours 50 minutes; Hickman, 2 days 22 hours 25 minutes; Columbus, 2 days 23 hours 31 minutes; Upper Tow Head, above Columbus, 3 days; Cairo, 3 days 1 hour.

This is the fastest time ever made to any place named, except the Lee's running time from Memphis to Cairo in 1857, which was in 16 hours 37 minutes.

The Lee ran under the disadvantage of a broken supply pump from a point thirty miles above New Orleans, and was compelled to keep two men constantly at work to keep the leak from becoming too large to allow a full supply of water to the boilers. The leak in the pipe is so great that the bilge pumps are compelled to run to free the hull from water. She also lost some time on the way by riveting a steam drum leaking badly, and was compelled to allow the steam to go down to ninety pounds to repair.

The Natchez lost considerable time also with her pump, but I could obtain no definite information of how much.

The Lee's progress from New Orleans was a long-continued ovation. Cannons were fired at many points, innumerable rockets sent up, and every day the banks of the great river showed groups and crowds of men, women and children, shouting and waving handkerchiefs. At Natchez the famous horns of the Princess, whose time has not been beaten for fourteen years, were taken down, and are now on board the Robert E. Lee, fairly and honorably won. Citizens of Cairo fired cannon many times while the Lee was passing, and the whole population turned out en masse, while over one thousand persons from Louisville, St. Louis, Evansville, Paducah, and other places, were here or on board the steamers Old Fulton, Idlewild, Armada, Rubicon, and others which went down the river several miles to see the wonderful racers pass under full headway.

The swift steamer Idlewild, the crack boat of the lower Ohio river, went alongside the Lee to obtain passengers, and although the Idlewild was at her greatest speed, the Lee was passing so rapidly as to make it impossible to make a rope fast to the Idlewild until the Lee stopped her engines. During a greater part of the race the competitors have been in sight of each other, adding greatly to the excitement and character of the race. Some Southern paper said the Lee ran into the chute and was compelled to back out. Her pilots contradict this. About eight miles above Cairo, the Lee seemed to touch bottom, and for some minutes she was turned crossways of the river in full sight of the city. The Natchez ran the same course, and did precisely the same thing. Each boat lost about four minutes. Both boats lost about one hour, and probably more, last night, by fog and darkness.

ST. LOUIS, July 4.—The steamer Robert E. Lee arrived at 11:25 a. m., in three days, eighteen hours and fourteen minutes from New Orleans, beating the Natchez's time on her last trip three hours and forty-four minutes, and the Jas. M. White's famous time four hours and fifty-five minutes. The Natchez was detained by a heavy fog below Grand Tower, one hundred and twenty-five miles below here, and did not pass that point until 8:30 a. m.

The trip was an ovation from first to last. Along the river thousands flocked, even from miles from the interior, to see the racers pass, and bonfires, cannons, pistols and every thing that could shoot were brought into use to give vent to feelings on the occasion. The crowd at the levee here was immense. The bank of the river was lined with people from Carondolet to above the city for a distance of six miles and windows and house tops along the city front were filled with enthusiastic spectators. No similar event ever caused such an excitement or brought out such crowds. A million dollars probably changed hands on the result of this race.

The Natchez was detained by a dense fog below Grand Tower, and had not arrived at 6 o'clock p. m.

Midnight.—The banquet at the Southern Hotel to-night to Capt. Leathers, of the steamer Natchez, and Capt. Cannon, of the steamer Robt. E. Lee, was quite a brilliant affair. About one hundred steamboatmen, including several of the oldest in the west, sat down. Both Captains were toasted, and responded by proxy, and the evening passed harmoniously and with the best feeling.

Le Nord says that Mr. Cumming, against whom a warrant has been issued in London in connection with the charge of personating women, went to Brussels immediately after the arrest of Park and Boulton, and put up at one of the best hotels. As, however, he had no papers, and could not give evidence as to his means of exisistence, he was requested to leave the country. The Nord adds, that when he was called upon he had his hair in curl papers, and that portraits in which he and a friend were represented in woman's clothes were found in his rooms.

PARIS, July 6.

The Constitution to-day says: We learn that government would consider the Spanish enthronement of the Prince of Hahensaller as a check and menace to France. Under these circumstances the government has decided to energetically oppose the project.

Prime Minister Ollivier gave a grand banquet last evening. A great crowd was present, among whom were General Prim, Baron Wortler, the Prussian Ambassador. The latter left early, which fact gave rise to much comment, many asserting that France would have a just cause of war if the candidature of the Prince were insisted upon.

Late yesterday evening, after his interview with the Emperor, M. Ollivier saw the Duke of Gramount, the Minister of Foreign Affairs, and the Ambassador from Spain. The result of these meetings was a firm and energetic note to Baron Wortler, and immediately on its receipt the Baron departed for Ems to meet the King of Prussia.

There is considerable excitement in commercial circles here. Bourse opened flat.

A Washington special to the Tribune says: It is rumored and credited in official circles that Hamilton Fish has tendered his resignation. Fish has been urging the President to accept his resignation as he desires to retire from public life in this country. The President has said that he would not permit him to retire if he could by any means keep him in the State Department, as he regarded his staying there as a personal favor to himself. It is generally understood that Fish will succeed Motley at the Court of St. James.

At the meeting of the Quarantine Commissioners yesterday a committee of merchants, headed by Kirkland, read their remonstrance against what they regard as exhorbitant taxes put upon vessels arriving at this port. A spicy discussion took place between several of the merchants and Mayors Hall and Kalfech, and the Board finally adopted the rates as proposed by Dr. Bell.

It appears by the report of the Register of Vital Statistics to the Board of Health that the death rate of this city last week was higher than that of any corresponding week of the past fifteen years. WASHINGTON, July 6.

There has been no executive session of the Senate since the New York nominations were sent in and consequently they have not been referred. The nomination of Murphey goes to the Committee on Commerce, of which Senator Chandler, of Michigan, is chairman, who is in the habit of looking closely at the political record of all nominees who come before him. An effort will be made to induce the committee to report the nomination of Murphy back without any recommendation and thus leave the contest to be fought out in the Senate. There is no question but that the fight will be a very earnest if not a bitter one. Messrs. Davis and Hillhouse will be confirmed for their respective positions as soon as they can be reached.

Railroad War Ended.

The railroad war in Duchess county has terminated by the withdrawal on the part of the Hartford and Erie Railroad Company of all proceedings now pending to recover possession of the Duchess and Columbia road, leaving the road in possession of those who built it.

CONGRESSIONAL PROCEEDINGS.

Senate.

WASHINGTON, July 6.

Mr. McCreery asked consent to take up the bill for the relief of 75 Kentuckians from political disabilities.

Mr. Drake objected, because the bill contained the names of persons who persisted in holding office in defiance of the 14th amendment.

Mr. Abbott, from the Committee on Pacific Railroad, reported an amendment to the bill incorporating the Extension Railroad Company.

Mr. Wilson moved to set apart Thursday evening for the consideration of the conference report on the army bill. Agreed to.

The House river and harbor bill was then taken up.

Mr. Chandler, chairman of the Committee on Commerce, stated many meritorious amendments had been suggested, by the committee, which had reported back the House bill without amendment. He hoped the Senate would stand by the committee.

Several amendments were agreed to, for the improvement of Southern harbors and one rejected, for the appointment by the Secretary of War of three engineers to examine bridges now erected or in process of erection across the Ohio river and report at the next session whether the bridges do or will interfere with free navigation.

The bill was reported to the Senate and the amendments made in Commitee of the Whole. Agreed to and the bill passed.

Mr. Williams, from the Conference Committee on the currency bill, reported the committee adopted the bill as passed by the Senate, except that the amount of new currency was fixed at fifty-four millions instead of forty-five millions. Mr. Williams stated the Comptroller of the Currency was to provide immediately for the distribution of this increased circulation of forty-four millions, giving Western States what they were entitled to under existing law, and that as soon as the census returns for 1870 were in a redistribution was to be made. Report adopted.

The Senate resumed consideration of the naval appropriation bill and then took a recess.

House.

Mr. Randall presented the minority report, taking opposite views.

Mr. Cessna gave notice he would call up the matter for action next Tuesday.

Mr. Julian reported a bill defining swamps and overflowed lands and explained the necessity of the bill, and informed the House the practice under the swamp land act has been to have lands surveyed after a freshet and in this way millions of acres have gone into the clutches of State authorities and been dealt to speculators in great bodies without adherance to any rule or definition that would protect the rights of the United States.

Mr. Halman moved to table it. Rejected.

On motion of Mr. Julian the bill was postponed till the third Wednesday of December.

Mr. Winans reported a bill relinquishing to the corporation of Fremont, Ohio, a certain parcel of ground in Fremont. Passed.

The Senate bill to create a port of delivery at Duluth was reported back from the Committee on Commerce amended by attaching Duluth to the Collection District of Lake Superior. Passed.

Mr. Dawes, from the Committee on Appropriations, reported several bills carrying into effect decrees of certain courts in cases of English vessels illegally seized by United States cruisers, which passed.

During the reading of the bills, Mr. Butler expressed an unwillingness to vote for them, while within the last week, six American fishing vessels had been captured by British war vessels and carried into Canadian ports.

Mr. Schneck offered a resolution calling on the Secretary of the Treasury for a statement as to the public debt since the organization of the Goverment. Adopted.

Also, a bill authorizing Geo. Dick, of Butler county, Ohio, to import from Scotland, free of duty, a common road steam locomotive for experimental purposes. Passed.

The motion to reconsider the vote on Saturday in the Louisiana contested election case was tabled and the oath of office administered to Dorrell. The undersigned would hereby give notice to manufacturers and purchasers of oil, making, selling or using Drilling Jars made of wrought iron or steel combined, that by virtue of certain instruments duly recorded in the United States Patent Office, we own the sole and absolute right, title and interest in three patents for Drilling Jars, one granted to James C. Emerson, in July, 1862, and two to E. Edwards Guillot, in May, 1863; said patents covering all Jars made of wrought iron and steel combined, and applied substantially in the manner represented in said patents and generally known as steel jars.
Griffin's Patent
WATER PACKER!
This is one of the most useful Patents for oil operators ever invented.
It has several advantages over any other Seed Bag or water packer in use.
1st. It can be put down quicker and is instantly ready for use as there is no waiting for seed to swell, and by its quick action the well is kept clean.
2d. It can never unseat tubing or cause it to jump in a well, as the old seed bag often does.
3d. It is so constructed by means of a left hand screw thread that it can be loosened in a few minutes and removed from the well without difficulty. Even the caving in of the rock above the Packer will not prevent the casing being drawing out readily. It can be taken out and put back without repairs.
4th. This is the only Water Packer in use that has a Patent on, all others being an infringement upon the rights secured by letters Patent granted by the United States to Anson D. Griffin, August 13th, 1867. The Packer is now offered to the public at the low price of Twelve Dollars each, and the money will be refunded by us or our agents to all parties buying them where they do not give entire satisfaction.
Every other Packer in Use has Fastened Strings of Tubing and Casing, so they cannot be Drawn From the Well.

THE Senatorial conferee convention meets at Corry to-day.

THE street sprinkler is a refreshing sight in our streets these hot, dusty days.

REV. DR. ROBINSON who is announced to preach at the Baptist Church this evening, arrived in town last evening.

A NEW bridge is in course of construction over the mill race on Franklin street. This is a much needed improvement.

THE complimentary ball and supper to the oil operators and hardware men of the oil regions will take place to-night at Innis & Co.'s new manufactory, Oil City.

THERE was a destructive fire in Rochester on the morning of the fifth. The National Hotel barn and the old Wood livery stable being burned. Two fine horses were consumed. The origin of the fire was the careless discharge of fire-works.

THE Gas Company laid 1,600 feet of street mains in the month of June, and purpose during the present month laying mains 1,700 feet, supplying West end of Main, East and West Walnut, and connecting Main and Spring streets, through Second street.

WE commend to the perusal of oil producers the letter of Mr. Sterling Bonsall, detailing some successful experiments of his own in drilling at the Foster station. We commend also the suggestion of the writer that producers should exchange views on the improvements and most advantageous ways of operating, etc., etc.

MESSRS. DOTY & SEELY are closing out their entire stock of plants at cost. They have choice varieties and an extensive stock, and purchasers will find it advantageous to call and select as early as possible. The prices are all marked down, and a little money will now go a great ways in the adornment of private grounds. Try it and see.

THE opening of Wm. J. Innis & Co.'s manufactory at Oil City will be celebrated by a complimentary supper and ball this evening. Extended preparations have been made for the entertainment of guests. It is the intention of the proprietors to bring together as many of the oil operators and hardware men as possible, and to this end invitations have been very generally distributed.

INTERNAL REVENUE OF TITUSVILLE.—The income returns from the city of Titusville for 1869 were a little less than one quarter of the returns for the entire Congressional district, which includes the counties of Crawford, Venango, Mercer and Clarion. The monthly lists of sales in Titusville average fully one-third of the entire district. The returns for Titusville show an increase of fifty per cent. during the last twelve months.

MESSRS. WEED & HOSKINS began testing a well on the Huidekoper farm Monday last and find that it is yielding fully one hundred and twenty-five barrels per day. These fortunate gentlemen are the owners of the well known hardware store at Pleasantville, and their friends, that is, all who know them, will rejoice at their good fortune. The working interest is three-fourths, nearly all of which is held by them. The market may be called active with upward tendency.

PRESENTATION.—Mr. and Mrs. C. M. Allen of this city were last evening made the recipients of a handsome silver tea service consisting of eight pieces. Mr. Allen has been superintendent of the Presbyterian Church Sabbath School for the last two years and is now about to remove to Iowa. The friends who gathered last evening at his house and who made the presentation were of the congregation of the church with which he has been associated for the last six or seven years. The best wishes of his friends will follow him to his new home.

A MELANCHOLY event occurred at the Erie and Pittsburgh docks, at Erie, Pa., on Monday evening, about eight o'clock. Two sons of Capt. Clark, master of the bark Erastus Corning, were playing on the dock, the oldest, eleven years of age, having been sent by his father to take care of the younger brother. The first news of the calamity was the youngest running to the vessel and telling them that his brother had fallen off the edge of the dock. Every effort was made to save him, but before the body could be recovered, life was extinct.

Drilling Wells—Experience of a Practical Operator—Valuable Suggestions.

FRANKLIN, July 5, 1870.

Editors Morning Herald:

In March last, I drilled a well (No. 9) through four and one quarter inches casing instead of five and five-eighths. The object was to use smaller driving pipe and tools, and drill a smaller hole, experience having shown it to be difficult to get a straight and round eight-inch hole, and more than all, save expense. The experiment was very successful. The well has been cleaned, drilled deeper, and torpedoed through this casing, and in every respect works as well as the larger casing and has averaged over twenty barrels per day.

I have since drilled No. 10—823 feet deep—and the result is so good that I feel bound to communicate it, for the general benefit of the business. Commenced driving six inch driving pipe on April 29th; drove five joints to bed rock; commenced on May 2d, drilling a five-and-seven-eighths inch hole, and drilled it partly through the second sand rock; then drew in the reamer to five inches, and drilled the length of the tools. This was to save the wearing of the casing by the tools, and also to get a taper shoulder for the casing to fit into. I then took off the collar, at the bottom of the casing, which was but five inches in diameter on the outside, and put on a band with an outside diameter of five and three-sixteenths inches; above this I put a seed bag, not tied at the top, and cased the well; the band shoved down and fitted tight into the taper shoulder and the seed bag settled down into it, making a tight joint, and yet one I can jam down tighter if necessary. The tubing was then put in and the well pumped dry. I then took a set of smaller tools and drilled with oil a four inch hole to the third sand rock, and was astonished at the time made. On the 21st of June, at a depth of 805 feet, the third sand was reached, and the same day the well commenced flowing through the casing. We tubed and pumped; drew tubing and cleaned out the mud vein as it run in. This we had to repeat, each time drilling deeper, and stopped at 823 feet. The well has since averaged twenty barrels per day without torpedoing. We stopped four days to put in new slides to engine. The result sums up thus: Driving pipe 2 days; drilling in May 30 days, less stoppage 4 days to repair, and 4 Sundays—leaving 22 days; in June 21 days, less 3 Sundays and 2 days for casing, tubing and pumping off water—leaving 15 days. Total drilling time for 823 feet, 28 days. Cost of drilling as per contract, $1,100; cost of casing 610 feet at $1.24 per foot, $756.40. The balance of the cost was the same as for an ordinary tubed well, I think. I saved in extra cost of driving pipe, tools, rig, casing, coal labor, and price per foot for drilling, from $1,500 to $2,000, and avoided the trouble and length of time generally incident to "Dry Holes" through large casing. I then use my wells as if not cased—treating the casing as merely a wall to shut out the water. I put in a seed bag on the tubing down near the third sand rock. As the amount of gas is light, this shortens the time of the heads of oil, makes the well pump easier, and, it seems to me, more lasting. I have averaged over 70 barrels per day for a year, with three wells, and have had the same wells producing for over two years each, and my experience has been, that casing, (unless you can seed-bag through it), is not an advantage to the wells. This plan allows of either way of using it, as the casing is four and one quarter inches inside diameter, and the lower part of the hole is four inches, the seed bag can be put in tight.

I think producers should exchange views on the improvements and most advantageous ways of operating, and if any one has a better plan, or differs with me in conclusions, I would be glad to hear from him, and will always take pleasure in showing on the lands of Lewis, Bonsall & Co., at Foster Station, A. V. R. R., the plan of our operations, and giving any information. STERLING BONSALL.

Nitro-Glycerine and the Oil City Tunnel.

CARD OF THANKS FROM MR. GEO. WEST.

To the Borough authorities and residents of Oil City:

Having been engaged in blasting with the above powerful agent in the Oil City Tunnel for the past five months, I hereby tender my thanks to the Common Council and residents of Oil City for their courtesy and interference to the progress of the work to its near completion, showing that nitro-glycerine with proper handling is so much safer, as it is more powerful, than any other blasting compound in use. I should have preferred staying to have seen the completion of the work but for impaired health and other circumstances. I consider that after using and carrying through the streets several thousand pounds of nitro-glycerine, a great part of which was in a condition for use, and the operation being a series of successes, with one exception, together with the rapid progress of the work that no accident has occurred in the use and transit of such an active explosive, is a marvel second only to the skill of the engineer in bringing the headings of the tunnel to meet within two inches. Respectfully,

GEORGE WEST.

Oil City, July 5, 1870.

ORDINATION SERVICES.—The ordination of the Rev. Andrew Murdock, pastor of the First Baptist church, will take place to-day, July 7th. Afternoon services commence at 2:30, evening services at 7:30. The sermon will be preached in the evening by the Rev. Dr. Robinson, President of the Rochester Theological Seminary. The Revs. Messrs. Miles, of Jamestown; Austin and Crane, of Meadville; Spoor, of Oil City; Harvey, of Erie; Connelly of Corry, and others, are expected to be present.

Dr. Robinson is, without doubt, one of the best public speakers in the country. It would be hard to find, in the ranks of the American clergy, his superior in many of the best qualities of pulpit discourse. His delivery is impressive, and his eloquence that of solid argumentation, such as carries conviction with it. As Dr. Robinson will preach in the evening, many of our citizens will be able to attend. All are cordially invited.

MASONIC.—There will be a special assembly of Corry Council No. 37, Tuesday evening, July 12th. M. P. G. M., C. F. Knapp will be present to confer degrees.

HEARTH AND HOME at HOWE'S.

Street Pavements.

Before many years elapse, Titusville will require street pavements of a more durable character than the present. The best streets we now have are composed of broken stone road-beds covered with gravel. Such material requires frequent repairs to keep the streets in good order, even during the dry season, while in bad weather they are badly cut up, and present a very filthy and irregular condition. From time to time, property owners have agitated the question of modern improvements, and the matter has been somewhat discussed in Common Council; but the large outlay which such improvements involve, has deterred even an experimental effort to introduce them here. If, however, we expect to maintain for our city the enviable distinction already acquired, as the most attractive and desirable place of residence in the oil region, we must early adopt some better system of street improvements, and in view of that necessity, it is well to direct public attention to the most popular methods employed in other localities. Dr. Louis A. Thayer, an eminent physician in New York, who declares that he has had the question "forced" on his attention, writes to the Tribune concerning pavements as follows:

There are many different methods of laying each of these materials, some of which have been universally condemned. For instance, the "cobble-stone," which is simply an abomination in the sight of horse and man. The "macadam" produces dust which is not only disagreeable, but deleterious to health. Without comparing structural devices, and in order to get at the merits of the materials, and make a just estimate of both, let blocks of stone of suitable size and dimensions be placed upon end. Now, all things considered, which makes the best pavement, the stone or the wood? In other words, which material subserves best the purpose intended by paving?

The objects sought in paving streets are cleanliness, health, comfort, facility of locomotion, the consequent saving of time, labor and expense of transportation. Pavement of stone does not facilitate transportation, but at the expense of horse shoes, horse flesh, and of great wear and tear of vehicles. The danger to rider and driver, on stone, is, to say the least, unpleasant, while the rattling and clattering noise, the side-tripping and sliding of wheels, and slipping of horses, is a positive discomfort. Besides, it has been estimated that the dirt from stone pavement exceeds that from wood by at least one-third. This dirt contains, with other deleterious substances, pulverized stone, which enters the lungs in minute particles, and will sometimes make a lodgment in the most delicate membranes of the air cells, and often create irritation and inflammation. On the other hand, wooden pavements are easily kept clean, they are smooth and elastic, they give certainty of footing, ease of draught, and we ride, drive and haul over them with little noise, with great ease, safety, comfort and satisfaction. Indeed, they so fully fill all the requirements that those who favor the stone make but one objection to the wood, and that is want of durability. Persons go out of their way to get upon wooden pavements, and the universal exclamation is, "This is the pavement we want, if it will only stand." If wood can be preserved from decay it will "stand." From experiments lately made in Europe and America I feel satisfied that the wood can be preserved from decay. Coal tar contains certain ingredients which will preserve wood from decay, if properly applied. Carbolic acid, or creosote of coal, is one of the finest antiseptics known; whether applied to animal or vegetable substances—and this is one of the ingredients of coal tar. The mere dipping of wood into coal tar is not sufficient, more especially if the wood be green, as is generally the case. Because, in the first place, the coal tar will not penetrate wood filled with sap. In the next place, the crude coal tar used furnishes a covering similar to a coating of paint, and when fermentation in the sap takes place, and gasses are generated, they are confined by this coating of coal tar, and dry rot ensues. It is a well known fact that painting green wood makes it rot more rapidly.

If, however, coal tar be applied in the form of vapor (as, for instance, by the "Robbins Process") the heat will expel the moisture from the wood, coagulate the albuminous portion of the sap, and the carbolic acid in the sublimated form, will permeate the block and completely saturate it, thus preventing decomposition. By the use of wood thus treated, our pavements would be filled not only with an antiseptic, but with one of the best disinfectants known. If it be thought wise to sprinkle the streets of New York and all the great cities of Europe with water mixed with carbolic acid, because of its disinfecting properties, how much better to have the whole street laid with blocks of wood completely saturated with it. Disinfectants, such as chlorine, permanganate of potash, or candy fluid, oxydize the gaseous products given off by putrifaction, and all organic matters with which they come in contact, while carbolic acid merely destroys organic substances. The former deal with the effects, the latter with the causes. A very small quantity of carbolic acid will prevent decomposition of substances. Being volatile it meets with and destroys, according to Dr. Jules Lemaire, the germs and sporules which float in the atmosphere and vitiate it. The health of a city will be greatly promoted by laying the streets with wooden blocks, saturated with carbolic acid. In the subject of pavements, you and I and the whole community have a deep interest. This fact will furnish apology for so long a communication.

LEWIS A. SAYRE, M. D.

NEW YORK, July 2, 1870.

The "Robbins process," spoken of above, is described as follows: Wood blocks are placed in an iron, air-tight chamber, connected with a retort or still. The retort being filled with "dead oil," a distillation from coal-tar, heat is applied to it. As the temperature rises, the different substances composing the oil are vaporized. First appear the lighter oils as benzine or naptha and camol oil, which boil at 170 to 230 degrees. The heat of these evaporates and drives out all the moisture in the pores of the wood, and coagulates the albumen of the sap. The heat rises, and carbolic acid, which vaporizes at 400 degrees, comes over and immediately penetrates the inmost recesses of the wood. The vapor of the heavy oils, as napthaline and para-napthaline, follow the carbolic acid and saturate completely all the fibrous parts of the wood. As the heat is withdrawn all the oils condense, and the wood so treated is seasoned, filled with oil, and thus preserved from decay.

Possibly in no city in the Union has the comparative merits of wood and stone pavements been more thoroughly tested than in Boston, and the Post of that city yields the palm to the former most decidedly:

In regard to the superiority of wood over stone pavements for safety, comfort, durability, economy of construction, freedom from noise and cleanliness, we suppose there is little doubt. Truckmen, expressmen, and drivers of all kinds of vehicles, agree on these points. If all the streets were paved with wood, the saving in the wear and tear of each horse and vehicle would be from fifty to one hundred dollars annually. The streets outside of business centre should be paved with wood; but the alternation of wood and stone is injurious, because the accummulations from the stone make the wood more slippery than it would naturally be, and more slippery than stone. If one street from the northern to the southern part of the city were paved with wood, all kinds of vehicles would seek that in preference to any one paved with stone. The same team will draw twice the weight over the wood, and its peculiarity of maintaining, in all seasons and all conditions of weather, the same compact and even surface.

Letter from Petrolia, Ont.

PETROLIA, July 3, 1870.

Oil business here is rather flat, owing chiefly to the limited production of crude. Our shipments at present nearly double our production. If this state of things continues much longer, our export interests must severely suffer. Our average weekly yield of crude does not exceed 4,500 barrels. The northwest territory has not as yet come up to the anticipations of the holders of land there. Two or three wells have been completed without a remunerative supply of oil veins struck. The Shoemaker, No. 4, in which the tools were fast, after getting them out and drilling 350 feet from the surface, began to flow, and is now pumping largely. A Mr. Kennedy, from London, is about putting down two wells on the lot adjoining this. The Jeffry No. 1 is now 200 feet in the rock and progressing finely. We want and must have development or our oil business is done. New territory must be struck or our export firms will stop. They are at present doing a large trade. Business matters here if not brisk, are at any rate sound and sure. Our population is on the increase, and I find that some Americans have commenced the oil supply business. They appear steady, energetic men who thoroughly understand it. The sales made during the last week were some 3,000 barrels, and the stock of crude on hand is very small. Crude, $2.00 to $2 05 per barrel; Refined, 21 to 22 cents.

The Use of Adjectives.

Nearly every one who has scribbled for the public can recall the time when he strove with all his might to fill his page with words in the hope that some good grain would be found among the chaff; when he mistook vivacity for imagination and a loose flow of words for splendor of diction. Young writers are troubled a great deal in this way. They remind one of the "noisy geese that gabbled o'er the pool," as described by Goldsmith. They have something to say, but they use a great many syllables to convey their meaning. Adjectives, especially, are the bane of scribblers, nor are the best authors entirely free from a too lavish display of them. But the latter, disciplined by long practice, mostly keep within reasonable bounds, as they ought to do. It is rare, indeed, that more than two adjectives can be used without weakening the force of a sentence. The standard writers in a language take liberties that may not be safely followed. Now and then they use three, four, and even more adjectives in the same sentence in connection with the same noun. Take the following from modern authors, which beginners ought not to imitate. Thus, Tennyson, in Enoch Arden:

"The dewy, meadowy, morning breath of England."

Hawthorn, in the Toll Gatherer's Day, has these lines:

"In the morning—the dim, gray, dewy summer's morn."

"Two wrinkled, withered, witch-looking old gossips."

While speaking of winter, Thackeray says in the Virginians:

"Old winter time, when the cracking, shivering old tree-tops are bald and covered with snow."

And in the "Newcomes" he makes Clive write from Rome, in regard to St. Peters':

"I saw a great ghostly, darkling dome, rising solemnly up into the gray of night."

The words last quoted, show that Thackeray could be led away by alliteration as well as enticed by adjectives. Be careful of your adjectives.

Personal.

Mrs. Vanderbilt is noted in private circles as a singer.

Six religious and charitable societies in Philadelphia get $32,000 by the will of the late Elizabeth Chester Chauncey, of that city.

By a curious coincidence five names on one page (four consecutively) in the Norwich, Conn., city directory for 1870, read Slack Thomas, Slow George, Sly John, Small Nathan, and Smart Mary.

Mr. Edward Thornton, the British Minister, will spend the summer months in Newburyport, Mass.

The Boston Journal says: "Mr. Gilmore's next musical enterprise will be a grand International Jubilee, in which all nations will participate. High official authorities at Washington will cordially co-operate."

The Paris correspondent of the Pall Mall Gazette says that M. Emile de Girardin is disposing of the Liberte, and that M. Lesseps and the Duke D'Albufera are to be the purchasers, and that one of the conditions of the sale is that the present editor is to be a Senator.

Mr. Isaac Merrill, the venerable Universalist, died at his residence in Amherst, Mass., on Monday, aged 91. He walked to Milford the day before, a distance of five miles, to hear a Universalist sermon.

John S. Fiske, jr., the American Consul at Leith, whose name is connected with the last popular scandal in England, is a native of Watertown, N. Y., and is 32 years old. He was a student of Williston Seminary, entered Yale College in 1859 and graduated in 1863, and became a private tutor for boys in or near New York city. The Springfield Republican says: "He was called 'Sister Fisko' in college for the excessive effeminacy of his habits and manners; made pretensions to a special love of literature, and wrote poetry occasionally."

The Duchess de Montebello, maid of honor to Eugenie, and one of the beauties of Winterhalter's painted group, died recently.

Miss Elizabeth Garrett was recently received as doctor at the Ecole de Medicine, Paris. She had taken as her thesis the subject of "Headache"—not a very interesting question—but she treated it so brilliantly that the board at once gave her the diploma.

A very determined suicide was that of the late Joshua Keene, at Savannah, Ga. He had been drinking for several weeks, and one day last week went to his boarding house. Upon his arrival there he went inside the door, and, without holding conversation with any one, was observed to fire a pistol, simultaneously starting from the room, remarking that he would not live long after that. He then walked out on the sidewalk, where he remarked to a gentleman: "I think I can stand another shot," suiting the action to the word, fired, and immediately fell to the pavement and expired, the ball having penetrated the heart. Upon examination of the body it was discovered that he had been shot twice, the first ball having penetrated the upper portion of the breast. The deceased was a native of Waldoboro, Me., unmarried, aged 34 years.

A Broadside for Humbugs.—Incompetence and assurance generally go hand in hand; and of all the tribe of pretentious knownothings with which society is afflicted, the unscientific "medicine men" who attempt to tamper with the health of the community are the most dangerous and the most impudent.

So much by way of Text. Now for a special and particular application.

It appears that a mushroom growth of so-called "Bitters," is springing up under different names in various localities, particularly in the Southern and Western States, which the venders have the hardihood to recommend to easy-going people upon whom they think they can impose, as a substitute for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, long recognized by every class as the purest and best medicated stimulant and invigorant the world affords.

The concections referred to being composed of worthless material, offer a larger margin for profit than that Celebrated Tonic, and hence the anxiety of dollar-worshiping dealers to foist them upon the public in its place.

But "forewarned is forearmed," and all parties whom these distinguished (!) beings are endeavoring to coax and inveigle into substituting trash for a standard remedy, are hereby informed of the selfish and sordid motives which underlie the representations in question.

The great popularity and vast sales of Hostetter's Bitters cannot, of course, be seriously impaired by these "tricks of trade," but as the debilitated and suffering have a direct interest in the matter, it is only an act of common humanity to put them on their guard.

Infringement Notice.—The subscriber has learned that a certain firm in Titusville, known as "Bryan, Dillingham & Co.," have commenced the manufacture of SUCKER RODS with SOCKET JOINTS. This is a DIRECT INFRINGEMENT ON HIS RIGHTS, as his claim is "connecting two sections of rod by means of wedges, wedging sockets, and double coupling bolt." He does not specify any particular shaped wedge, nor of what material it shall be made. All rods made as above described outside of his manufactory, are direct infringements.

This, therefore is to caution Oil Operators, and all others, against buying or using any rods so made, except those of his manufacture, as by so doing they will lay themselves liable, and will be dealt with according to law. WM. J. INNIS.
